Hi Gary,

I've conferred with my colleagues in the Center for Evidence and Practice Improvement. Congressional assistance is not necessary for AHRQ to archive information on the AHRQ website. We are currently examining our website archiving policy to ensure public access to up to date information while also maintaining access to studies that contribute to the body of evidence accumulated over time. I hope this is helpful. I'd be happy follow up with Arbor Pharmaceuticals if there are additional questions.

Best,
Francis

Hello Dr. Chesley,

I have been in contact with representatives from Arbor Pharmaceuticals based in Georgia in regard to some issues they have with the study that is linked below. They have informed the office that the study might be outdated and that AHRQ has agreed to that fact but cannot remove the study from the website without congressional help. I wanted to get in touch with you to get a better grasp on the situation and what seems to be the hold up.
