What other privacy risks exist and how will they be mitigated?

In our reporting procedures, we occasionally capture links to notable tweets sent to @healthfinder by followers. However, these are only shared internally for the purposes of gauging success of our outreach, and they are only stored with user names (e.g., "@healthfinder") rather than the actual name. These are typically tweets from notable organizations. No tweets with personally identifiable information (e.g., names, phone numbers, etc) will be collected or stored. Also, individual profiles can share association of accounts which the users "follow". This should be mitigated by personal privacy settings.
